NEVADA WHEAT GROWING.

If ever there was an opportunity for Nevada to spring into operation this is the time. Through the medium of wheat this state could be rewarded many times for investing money in farm development. Instead of planting alfalfa where there is no stock to feed the farmers should turn their attention to planting wheat, which is as certain of a crop market as the expectation that the sun will rise in the east tomorrow morning. Nevada is destined to be a great wheat growing state. Wheat can be grown here without the expense or delay of waiting for costly irrigation systems. Dry farming would insure returns of from 25 to 40 bushels an acre, the land would cost as low as any land in the unbroken west and most of it would go directly to a main line of railroad with direct transportation at low rates to either coast.

The Canadian government is taking steps to double the wheat acreage next year, the purpose being to supply in part the deficiency in production resulting from the war in Europe. It is understood the British government, anticipating a long struggle, has asked the co-operation of the dominion in the matter of providing a food supply for the British soldiers and the people of the empire in general. The dominion government acted at once, and will go so far as to aid in the planting and plowing, and may also advance seed to those who require it. The colonies are certainly proving a tower of strength to the mother country in her hour of need.

There have been violent fluctuations in the Chicago wheat market ever since the war started. The price constantly increased as the Germans continued their march on Paris. When the retreat began the price went down and continued to fall until the army of the kaiser made a stand at the Aisne river. This was regarded as a German success and an indication that the war would be prolonged and a violent war took place. Whether the Germans are successful or not at this stage of the struggle, the Chicago speculators undoubtedly have the right view of the effect of Austro-German defeat or victory upon the grain markets. The British government, of course, has inside information as to the probable duration of the war. The fact that the dominion has been asked to raise more wheat indicates plainly enough the view taken in London.

There is big money in wheat at a dollar a bushel. If the war continues any considerable time the price may be double that amount before the time next year.

Up to date the Germans appear to have the best of it over England when a $100,000 submarine can sink three battleships worth $12,000,000 in less than fifteen minutes. This is the second successful submarine sortie of the Germans, while the vaunted British navy is trusting to dreadnaughts which seem to have gone into tailing.

A shorthand report of last night's protest meeting would make interesting reading for the creditors of some business men who seemed suddenly stricken with palsy of the tongue. Metropoliian papers would like to play up the actual facts of last night's meeting as reflecting the sentiment dominating the town of Tonopah.

The submissions imminent of the United States senate who proposed cutting salaries must have been aiming for notoriety rather than results. Who ever heard of a lawmaker reducing his own wages, especially when he has to devote all his time to the interests of his constituents?

When Turkey undertakes to call down Uncle Sam it is time to give the mouthpiece his walking papers. This is the kind of short sleeve diplomacy the country will back up. Even Mexico in its turn and distraught condition did not hesitate to order Japan off the Magdalene coast by cancelling all concessions.

When they continue to send out fashion reports and omit all mention of the doings of three million fighting men at Paris the imagination is taxed to the limit of endurance.

In spite of the war the usual number of imported Turkish cigarettes are being shipped from Richmond, Va., and Louisville, Ky.

If the administration had really desired to remain neutral it would have placed a war tax upon grape juice as well as upon wine.

There is just one thing that will restore prosperity in Europe when peace comes and that is the American tourist.

It is about time for the censor to stop that daily hint from Paris in the fashion columns.

The war correspondent probably will write poems and rants about the battle at Rheims.

Being a Belgian commission is much more comfortable than being a Belgian army.

The battle on the Aisne river seems to have degenerated into a shell game.

European geography continues to be a fascinating study.
